You don't need us to tell you the world is a big place. Though it seems like we're getting ever more connected, there are still plenty of opportunities to get off the grid. Itching to dive deeper into Argentina's gaucho country, Italy's under-the-radar ski towns, Japan's most incredible art site, or Thailand's unspoiled beaches? These 11 destinations you probably haven't heard of should be next on your bucket list.

The name Newberg may not ring any bells, but the town is the perfect gateway to Oregon's idyllic Willamette Valley, home to some of the country's best vineyards. Far more under-the-radar than Napa and Sonoma, the area is known for the fantastic Pinot Noirs it produces. The reason to stay in Newberg is the award-winning Allison Inn & Spa, a LEED Gold-certified resort on 35 acres with its own gardens, vineyards, and a renowned spa.
